

Advice in the light of the COVID-19 outbreak

How can I protect others and myself during the period of viruses?

By washing your hands carefully and regularly

By covering your mouth and nose with your arm when coughing and sneezing

By immediately disposing of a used tissue

By staying at home when you are feeling ill or not well

By avoiding contact with other people if you suspect you have fallen ill

What can I keep in mind when travelling during the period of viruses?

Avoid contact with people displaying symptoms of the disease, especially coughing people

Avoid markets and locations where live and dead animals are treated

Wash your hands with soap and water and use disinfectants that contain alcohol

After returning from a risk area, monitor your health for 14 days, and refrain from going to work or school if possible

There are grounds for suspecting a coronavirus infection when you have recently travelled to an outbreak area or have had contacts with infected people, and have symptoms of the disease, such as coughing, fever or breathing difficulties

What can I do as an entrepreneur to protect my staff and customers during the period of viruses?

Allow your staff to work from home when necessary

Try to find a way to allow workers returning from a risk area to remain at home for 14 days

Provide the customary hygiene and disinfectant products on the premises of the company as well as in public areas

Notify staff and customers of hygiene requirements

Notify posted workers of potential risks and dangers and remind them of the regular hygiene requirements

What can I keep in mind when attending and organising events during the period of viruses?

Seriously consider whether attending or organising the event is absolutely necessary

As an organiser of an event, you are responsible for making sure that people have the possibility of disinfecting their hands

It is wise to consult with a local healthcare provider before the event and agree on how to react to suspected cases of illness

Make sure that the surfaces of the bathroom, including the rubbish bin and the taps, are disinfected on a daily basis

If elderly or with a chronic illness, avoid attending public and major events

In any case, follow the website and social media channels of the Health Board for the latest updates
